1. Clerical Refresher Training Instructor Studies Civil Service Shorthand Tests. [] Chief, Clerical Refresher Training, spent part of Friday morning, 12 September 1958, talking to members of the Test Development Section, Civil Service Commission, to compare shorthand tests given by CIA and CSC. 7. Critiques of Clerical Orientation Training. The Clerical Orientation class of the past week was a particularly outstanding group. The nature of their comments, questions, and general response to the program was superior to those of several previous classes. With the future re-organization of the COT program in mind, the staff decided to ask for a written critique from each student concerning the entire week's program. The comments can be summarized as being complimentary to the entire program. Specific suggestions for improvement included lengthening the discussion on Office Protocol, allowing for more student participation as is done in telephone techniques, correspondence, and typing shortcuts, and including more visual aid material to get ideas across. Comments concerning the Security Briefing and the Communism portion were very favorable although it was felt by several that the Communism portion could be shortened somewhat (particularly the theory presentation) or made more interesting by illustrative materials. The movie "Nightmare in Red" was very well received. It was the general opinion that the Organization of CIA was more readily understood as it was presented in COT (where notes can be taken) as opposed to the CIA Introduction.

This critique was requested because [redacted] has [redacted] the assignment to revise Cler. Orientation this winter. She is methodically gathering this & other information in preparing.

Paul is giving this Monday p.m. program in a dutiful but uninspired way. He's concentrating on other phases of his job.
